Headline:
Heavy showers possible today and Monday. Turning drier thereafter.

Today:
Dry for many initially, with a few light showers and sunny spells. Showers sweep in across the country through the day, some of which could be heavy and possibly thundery. Maximum temperature 20 deg C (68 deg F).

Tonight:
Northern parts becoming drier through the evening, but showery rain replenishes in the south. Heavier rain easing though the earlier hours, leaving patchy light rain and drizzle for many. Minimum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Monday:
After a dull and drizzly start, scattered showers develop through the day, heavy at times and possibly producing hail and thunder. Some sunny spells forming in the afternoon. Maximum temperature 22 deg C (72 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Drier on Tuesday, with sunny spells and some lighter showers. Dry and sunny on Wednesday. Low cloud and drizzle on Thursday morning, but turning sunny later.
